Germany Reports Capture of Black Sea Naval Base

Berlin Command Claims Advance On Vital Sector

Official Statement Also Reports Gains in Stalingrad Area

Soviet Command Throwing Reserves into Critical Defense

BERLIN, (From German Broadcasts), Sept. 6 (AP)—The German high command tonight announced the capture of the Russian Black Sea naval base of Novorossisk and German military sources simultaneously claimed the Russians were throwing reserves into the fight to hold Stalingrad against "relentlessly advancing German troops."

Nazi sources described Novorossisk as the last naval harbor of importance left to the Russian black fleet after the fall of Sevastopol. The high command said booty from the capture was not yet ascertained.

The Berlin radio quoted the German transoceanic news agency as saying it had learned the Soviet military command was throwing in reinforcements into the fight for Stalingrad but that all Russian counter-attacks had been beaten off.

The agency report said an attempt by ten Soviet divisions and seven tank brigades to halt a German tank spearhead in the northwest sector between the Don and Volga rivers "collapsed under German fire" with the loss of eighty-four Soviet tanks.

German dive bombers were reported destroying anti-aircraft positions in Stalingrad and making repeated attacks on railway stations and traffic "on various rail lines north of the Volga city."

Allies Hit Jap Units in Kokoda

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, AUSTRALIA, Monday, Sept. 7 (AP)—Allied ground and air forces continued to smash Sunday at Japanese units in the Kokoda area of southeastern New Guinea, where the enemy has been attempting to push through a pass in the Owen Stanley mountain range toward the important Allied base at Port Moresby, sixty miles to the west, a communique said today.

No details of the ground fighting were given, but General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced that Allied fighters "in cooperation with ground forces" had made three bombing and strafing attacks on Japanese positions at Kokoda.

Kokoda is west of Buna, one of the three places where the Japanese landed in attempts to wrest Port Moresby from the Allies. The other landings were made in the Lae-Salamaua area and at Milne Bay, in the extreme southeastern tip of New Guinea.

Today's communique also announced that Allied heavy bombers had attacked an enemy cargo ship with unknown results off the southwest coast of New Guinea.

Green Adds a Fifth Guarantee To Roosevelt's "Four Freedoms"

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—from making it a reality," Green declared in a Labor Day statement. Philip Murray, president of the AFL, said today that in addition to the "four freedoms" enunciated by President Roosevelt, labor would insist upon a fifth guarantee being written into the peace terms after the war: "The freedom of workers in every land to join free and democratic trade unions of their own choice." "This is labor's own peace plank and no force on earth can stop us

Pinning the Silver Star for gallantry on the breast of Brig. Gen. Ira Eaker (right), chief of the U. S. Bomber Command in Britain, is Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, commander of the U. S. Army Air Forces in Britain. The decoration was awarded to Gen. Eaker for his leadership of a flying fortress raid on Abbeville, France, a few weeks ago.

RUSSIAN LINES HOLDING FIRM ON BOTH SIDES OF STALINGRAD

By EDDY GILMORE
MOSCOW, Monday, Sept. 7 (AP)—A reinforced Red army rolled back German lines northwest of Stalingrad and continued to hold firm southwest of the beleaguered Volga river city, but made "a fighting retreat to new positions" around the Black Sea port of Novorossisk, the Soviet midnight communique said today.

The high command announced that German forces had been driven from a number of villages northwest of Stalingrad in a series of counter-attacks, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. This was the third day that the Germans had failed to gain in the great battle which Berlin described as a "Red Verdun."

The Soviet high command said fighting around Stalingrad had grown even more fierce, with the Germans launching "ceaseless attacks" with tanks, planes and infantry. But the communique said: "Soviet troops are holding their positions and repelling enemy attacks."

Report Major Battle
Another major battle was raging around Novorossisk, major Russian naval base on the Black Sea. The Russians acknowledged Soviet forces had withdrawn in one sector after routing a Rumanian battalion.

(The communique failed to confirm a claim of the German high command that Novorossisk had been occupied by German forces.)

In the Mzodok area, where the Germans have driven a long, slender wedge along the Caucasus rail-

Roosevelt Faces Much Opposition To Decree Plans

Sen. Norris and Others Believe President Is Making Mistake

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt put the finishing touches to a sweeping anti-inflation program today while several senators served notice that any step to sweep aside by decree the statutory safeguards for farm prices would precipitate a grave breach between the executive and Congress. Senator Norris (Ind.-Rep.), one of Mr. Roosevelt's oldest and staunchest friends at the capitol, expressed the hope that the president would not "make a mistake like that—it would raise hell in Congress."

"It could only result in a fight between the president and Congress and if we had such a fight it might lose this war," Norris told interviewers. "Furthermore it would give those who have been crying 'dictatorship' all of these years a chance to renew their attacks."

AMERICAN SAILOR DESCRIBES MARINE OFFENSIVE ON TULAGI

(Editors Note: Bernard Riley of Bluebird, Minn., electrician's mate second-class, U. S. N., was present "by coincidence" Aug. 7 when United States Marines consolidated their hold on Tulagi and other islands in the Solomon offensive. Following is his story as related to veteran A. P. war correspondent Clark Lee.)

WITH THE UNITED STATES NAVY IN THE SOLOMON ISLANDS, Aug. 10—(Delayed) (AP)—During the past three days I saw United States Marines Raiders capture the islands of Tulagi, Gavutu and Tanambogo.

The Marines went about the job in a coldblooded, deadly manner. They annihilated the Japs almost to the last man and the fighting ended last night with the marines firmly holding all three key islands in Tulagi harbor.

The Japs used all the tricks that the marines had been taught to expect, but their trickery was no match for marine tommyguns, knives, bayonets and bravery.

Marines Cool and Brave
I never saw such a cool, determined bunch as those marines. Thank the lord they are on our side instead of fighting against us.

First of all, I had better make it clear that these marine shock troops are Raiders. Don't ever make the mistake of calling them Commandos or you're likely to be nursing a sore jaw. If you want to talk to them say "hey, marine," or "hey, raider," never say "hey, Commando." They don't like it.

These Raiders are picked for their size and toughness. All seem to be above six feet tall and as hard as nails. In training they get sprayed with animal blood thrown in their face, to see if they can take it. It was good training, because for the past three days there was plenty of bloodshed. The Raiders were out to kill Japs and they killed plenty.

In Fight through Coincidence
I got in on the fight through a coincidence. I was temporarily aboard a transport en route to my own ship at sea off the Solomons and got to go ashore. I wouldn't have missed it for the world.

Early in the morning of August 7, with clouds hiding the moon, our transport slipped into Tulagi harbor undetected and our planes swooped down to strafe and bomb the islands while our escorting warships shelled the shore.

We shoved off from our transport and went over to another transport to take aboard some Raiders. They quickly scrambled over the side and took seats in the bottom of the boat. Most of them lit cigarettes and crouched there calmly. There wasn't much talk. Looking back from my post in the bow, all I could see was helmets and shoulders of marines with their rifles between their knees.

My boat was the first which headed toward Tulagi. We had hoped to make a landing at 7:55 a. m., which was the time the first bombs fell on Pearl Harbor eight months before.

First Jap Trickery
We started to land at the south-

Germans Forced Back To Startling Point West of the Alemein Line

By HARRY CROCKETT
CAIRO, Sept. 6 (AP)—Strong and continuing pressure of the British Eighth army had forced the Axis back west of the El Alemein mine fields today to their starting point, point, greatly weakened after a futile week-long effort to find a soft spot in a stovepipe-shaped alley leading into the British defenses.

There was no doubt in the mind of either officers or observers here that Marshal Erwin Rommel threw everything he had in this drive and that he has been unhorsed from a full-scale offensive that was meant to take him to the Nile.

Rommel's Hopes Dashed
In fact, a prisoner told the British that the German commander himself visited the front just before the jump off, distributed cigarettes and declared "next week we will be in Cairo, boys."

But the blows struck at his spearhead beginning last Wednesday were so severe that not even a mighty diversion attack by his air forces was able to turn the course of battle in his favor.

For the moment at least Rommel's latest threat to Alexandria and the Nile valley was dissipated by the blows of tanks, land troops and the sky-ruled RAF and United States air forces which roamed the

ONE MAY BE "ECONOMIC CZAR"

William O. Douglas      Herbert Lehman

Harold D. Smith      Bernard Baruch

Speculation upon the naming of an "economic czar" to operate President Roosevelt's new inflation control plan sets forth these four men as the most likely candidates for the post. They are Herbert Lehman, retiring governor of New York state; Associate Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas; Budget Director Harold D. Smith, and Bernard Baruch, a presidential adviser.

SENATE MAY VOTE TOMORROW ON SPENDING TAX PROPOSALS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—Chairman George (G-Ga.) of the Senate Finance committee pledged "very serious consideration" for the treasury's spending tax proposal today while Senator Danaher (R-Conn.) pressed his retail sales stamp plan is a method of raising billions in revenue now and avoiding a slump after the war.

George reported that the committee might be ready to vote on the spending tax plan when it reconvenes Tuesday "since we're about through discussing many points." If the spending tax is rejected, George said, a sales tax will be "one of the most prominent means of raising new revenue that will come before the committee."

Danaher said his stamp plan was "not really a tax—I prefer to call it an assessment."

Here's how it would work: For every dollar you spent above a specified exemption, you would have to buy a dime's worth of special government stamps which you would paste in a book. When you got $25 in stamps you would take them to a postoffice and trade them for a non-negotiable bond, which would bear no interest until after the war.

If you wanted to get some good out of your bond immediately, you could turn it in on your income tax payment.

Conversely, these observers, who asked that their names not be used, expressed the opinion that the war might well be lost in the same period if "the United Nations continue to fight the way Hitler wants them to on dispersed fronts."

It is believed by these observers that "political considerations and anguished air demands by ground commanders on secondary fronts where the war can neither be won nor lost is cutting the American program for this most important of air theaters 'to ribbons' and seriously draining the striking power of the RAF."

Bombers Believed Shot Down during Attack on Nazis

Ends Record of Nine Straight Sweeps without a Loss

Tragedy Marks Greatest Aerial Attack of the Entire War

By EDWIN SHANKE
LONDON, Monday, Sept. 7 (AP)—After nine straight sweeps without a loss, two American Flying Fortress bombers were officially reported missing early today following the greatest aerial attack of the war on Nazi-occupied France.

Flying Fortress squadrons and fleets of Boston bombers smashed at Nazi airfields and an airplane factory yesterday while 400 Allied fighters swept fifty miles in diversionary attacks. Only three fighters were officially reported missing.

The heavily-armed Fortress bombers, on the other hand, were said by United States army headquarters to have destroyed five enemy fighters and probably destroyed thirteen more, and damaged another twenty-five in bitter aerial combat during Sunday's operations.

Questioning of returning Fortress crews disclosed that "large numbers" of enemy fighters were encountered in the raid on Meaulte, and many of the stratosphere bombers returned to their bases scarred by enemy gunfire.

The Fortress assaults today were twin attacks.

Four Squadrons Attack
Three squadrons of the big four-motored bombers attacked the airplane factory at Meaulte, near Albert, for the second time since they entered the European theater in earnest Aug. 17, while a fourth squadron bombed the St. Omer airfield.

Spitfire pilots escorting the Fortresses said the bombing of the

Japanese Forced Back at Kinhwa

CHUNGKING, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Chinese drive northward through coastal Chekiang province has gathered momentum and the Japanese are being hit hard in the vicinity of the provincial capital, Kinhwa, which the enemy is trying desperately to hold. The Chinese high command reported today.

Chinese forces made their most rapid advance about thirty-five miles east of the capital where forced marches brought them to the outskirts of the city of Tungkang. The city, a Chinese communique said, is now being attacked.

The Japanese have called in reinforcements to hold Kinhwa, and Lanchi, ten miles to the north.

The Chinese attacks, the high command reported, "are continuing and increasing in vigor." Kinhwa is an air base within bombing range of Japan.

The communique also reported Chinese forces stormed and occupied Hotchen, in southwestern Shensi province, on Aug. 28. Heavy casualties, it was stated, were inflicted on the Japanese.

up the sky for many miles. Despite a cloud layer visibility was good and the dull flash of exploding shells could be seen by watchers on English cliffs.

The Germans brought several batteries into action, firing as many as six shells at a time. Guns on the coast between Boulogne and Calais as well as others farther inland were fired. Watchers estimated at least 100 shells were fired on both sides.

Heavy Guns on Both Sides Light Up Area along English Channel

FOLKSTONE, England, Sept. 6 (AP)—Heavy guns on each side of the Straits of Dover thundered in a sharp exchange tonight which lasted approximately an hour.

A long-range battery on the British side opened the cannonade and, after half a dozen shells had been hurled across the straits, the Nazis replied.

Boche Has Been Stopped in Egypt, Willkie Declares

Roosevelt's Representative Pleased with Progress on Desert Front

By EDWARD KENNEDY

SOMEWHERE IN THE WESTERN EGYPTIAN DESERT, Sept. 6 (AP)—Wendell Willkie, after a tour of the desert front, expressed the conviction today that the German threat to Egypt has been eased.

Willkie returned from the fighting zones, where twice enemy fliers dropped bombs near him, with his confidence in the effectiveness of Egyptian defenses increased.

"My impression is that what has happened here today and the preceding two or three days is significant," the 1940 Republican candidate for president and now President Roosevelt's representative on a mission to the Middle East, Russia and the Orient, told correspondents.

Believes Boche Stopped

"The Boche has been stopped on this front,"

"But I don't say he has been eliminated," he added.

Willkie went through two air raids in the course of his desert tour. One took place as he slept at the secret headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Bernard Montgomery, British commander of the Eighth army. The second occurred while he was in the front area in the morning.

Willkie came to the fighting zone with Maj. Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, commander of American army forces in the Middle East. He wore khaki trousers and shirt and a sun helmet.

He dined at Gen. Montgomery's mess, and went to bed early. He was awakened as a German plane dropped a stick of bombs some distance away.

"The battle being fought here is as important as that 140 years ago at Aboukir (village northeast of Alexandria) in which Admiral Nelson destroyed the French navy and bottled up Napoleon in Egypt," he declared. "If the forward march of the Germans had not been stopped all Egypt would have been in danger. I think successes so far achieved were due to the generalship of Gen. Montgomery in co-operation with the RAP and the American air force."

furloughs and leaves jammed city streets, theatres, restaurants and hotels.

Baltimore's war plants, however, worked on as any other day except that the workers in many cases were getting bonuses of from fifty to 100 per cent.

The launching of two Liberty ships at the Bethlehem-Fairfield yards was to be a Labor Day reward for thousands of workmen who stayed at their posts in that plant.

Baltimore's transportation facilities were swamped under great surges of Labor Day travelers, many of whom in other years travel by their own gas buggies to go places. Officials predicted travel records would fall before Tuesday morning dawned.

Travel Curtailed

State police reported late yesterday that traffic over main arterial highways leading from Baltimore to Washington, Philadelphia, York and Hagerstown was above other weekends of the 1942 gasless season, but that it was nothing to compare with previous years.

Old time Ocean City business men reported crowds were the best of the season but that the people were doing little buying. One observed that his business so far this year was $40,000 below that of last year.

Most of the Ocean City visitors came from outlying points by bus, while automobilists seemed to be mostly nearby residents.

State police at Frederick struck a slightly different note when they reported traffic on county roads to be unusually heavy despite gas rationing. They reported many Pennsylvania and District of Columbia cars on the road.

Bus company officials said all indications pointed to a record turnover by the end of the holiday and that all available equipment was in use.

Frederick business establishments and industries, except defense plants, were closed for Labor Day.

The same story held true at Hagerstown. Defense plants worked on, and other businesses and industries closed down, private auto traffic was below par and train and bus transportation was up.

Significantly absent from news reports over the weekend was the customary volume of auto accidents, drownings and similar tragedies directly traceable to the holiday.

common people everywhere to enjoy liberty, democracy and the opportunity to work out their destiny as free men and women."

Secretary of the Navy Knox and Undersecretary of War Patterson issued a joint statement saying that "in no other country has labor enjoyed so full an opportunity to win its battle of production voluntarily and without coercion" and expressing the hope that "this happy relationship of cooperation between labor and the armed forces may continue as the stresses of the war increase."

AMERICAN SAILOR DESCRIBES MARINE OFFENSIVE ON TULAGI

west corner of Tulagi, near the hospital, but as we approached machineguns started firing from the hospital windows. This was our first experience with Jap trickery. We purposely had not bombed or shelled the hospital but the Japs were using it. They opened fire but their bullets fell short. We turned away and landed farther up the beach out of range.

As our boat hit the sandy shore the first marine jumped out. He was a husky fellow with a long black beard which must have taken six months to grow. I don't know whether he was a private or an officer. All the marines in speaking to each other used first names.

Others kept jumping ashore. They took last long drags on their cigarettes, grasped rifles or tommyguns and plunged into the woods which covered most of Tulagi. After a few seconds we could hear them shooting. They were as cool as could be and obviously knew their jobs.

Planes Aid in Attack

We went back to the transports and loaded guns and crews and landed them ashore. The Marines were still pouring into the woods and there was intermittent firing. All this time, in fact all day the seventh and eighth, our planes were overhead bombing and strafing in front of the advancing marines. It was really reassuring to see those planes.

While our boat was going toward the shore we received an air raid alarm and in the distance we saw the splashes of bombs dropping around our transports across the channel off Guadalcanal. I saw two Japanese planes plunge to the sea in flames and I heard that at least fourteen were downed.

After we made a few trips we were told to standby our transport to await the unloading of marine troops who weren't scheduled to go ashore until the raiders had the situation well in hand. We were anxious to see what was going on and three times we "accidentally" drifted in close until the marine commander reprimanded us.

During the afternoon our destroyers went inside the harbor and shelled Tananabogo and Gavutu. In Tananabogo practically the entire island was honeycombed with underground positions built of cement and sheet metal. The marines had plenty of trouble there.

We transferred to a lighter used for taking tanks ashore and spent that night and the next night aboard. We ate army field rations which really were delicious. You're supposed to take one hour to eat a can of these rations, but we gulped them down in five minutes.

During Friday some Japs swam to the wreckage of a four-engine flying boat off Gavutu. Only one wing was above the water with the hull submerged, but somehow the Japs set up a machinegun and started firing on our boats approaching Gavutu.

The marines finally located the source of the firing and silenced it.

Saturday we stood by ready to land troops and kept circling while our bigger ships—transports and warships—maneuvered in the big roadstead between Tulagi and Guadalcanal.

At mid-morning we received word Jap bombers were coming, and at 11:30 we saw a dogfight over the channel. Just before noon we saw twenty-three big bombers coming in from the east over Florida Island. They were flying low—just off the water. Our ships were maneuvering, one off Tulagi, the other off Guadalcanal. The Japs flew right between them.

Seven Japs Bagged

Our anti-aircraft from all ships opened as soon as the Japs came into range, and the sky was a solid sheet of fire. I saw seven Japs go down. Four of them received direct hits from one of our cruisers.

When hit, the planes became balls of fire, plunged into the water, burned briefly, then sank without a trace. The remaining planes went out of sight, and we learned only one left the area entirely—with its port motor on fire and two fighters on its tail.

A destroyer was hit by bombs Saturday. We learned that on Friday one transport had been set afire by a plane crashing into its deck. We saw the fire Saturday, and it seemed under control then.

We tied up to our transport Saturday night. High winds broke us loose, but we kept near the ship. At 2 a. m. Sunday word passed from the ship "all is well." Then hell broke loose.

Over to the west, toward the channel, there was a sudden rumble of gunfire. Instantly three ships were burning, great blazes of light against the black night.

One Ship Explodes

One ship seemed to explode and looked as if it was lifted right out of the water by the explosion. I saw searchlights briefly illuminating a ship. Then there were big gun flashes both from the ships with the searchlights and from the ship that was being illuminated. We knew it was a fight between Jap and American surface vessels.

It was impossible to tell whether we were winning or losing or what was happening. We heard conflicting reports and three times before sunrise we were lifted aboard the transport, which prepared to leave the area.

At 5:30 a. m. the transport pulled out and we thought we were abandoned. We went over to another transport nearby where we were told the landings would continue as scheduled.

We took supplies aboard and headed inshore. By mistake we landed on Gavutu instead of Tulagi. Marines were walking along the beach only a few feet from us. Frequently one would kneel and fire at some target we couldn't see. Five raiders came along the beach and suddenly opened fire with tommyguns at a coconut tree. We thought they'd gone crazy. A few coconuts dropped from the tree. Then a dead Jap fell down, and we decided the raiders weren't crazy.

Land on Wrong Beach

The marine commanding officer told us we were on the wrong beach and we had just started to shove off for Tulagi when two big marines, each well over six feet tall, appeared with a diminutive Jap. They were carrying him easily by the arms. They set him down in front of the commanding officer and he suddenly squirmed and ran away. The marines shot him.

We went over to Tulagi, getting shot at from Tananabogo en route, but the shots fell short. As I had no duties, I walked along the beach while the boat was unloading. Fires were burning everywhere. Tin and wooden buildings were wrecked by our bombs and shells. I went into the government office building on the waterfront. There were Japanese supplies and uniforms lying around and a sign "American Airlines" hanging from the ceiling.

Already the marines were cleaning out debris and patching the roof. One nearby building had been used as a rice storehouse by the Japs. Evidently a bomb had hit it squarely. Rice was scattered everywhere with a few sacks still intact.

Attack Complete Surprise

We saw plenty of evidence that our attack had been a complete surprise. Some places bowls partially filled with rice and other food were standing on the tables, with chopsticks scattered about. We found some Japanese sake and beer and champagne cider, and tried them all.

We made ten trips to the beach during daylight Sunday, and several times I wandered considerable distances around Tulagi. From the beach a path led through a ravine leading from the north to the south side of the island, through hills. The ravine is about fifty yards long, fifteen feet deep and eight feet wide.

Several of our marines with rifles were lying on their stomachs on top of the ravine. Others were gathering brush which they threw on the bodies of three Japs. They threw matches and lighted the brush. They told me it was to smoke out five other Japs in a cave in the side of the ravine.

While I was watching one Jap stuck a rifle out of the cave and shot. The bullet hit a marine in the elbow, missing the bone. Another marine tapped him on the shoulder and said "Dressing station's down there." The marine got up without a word and walked down. Another marine took his place. Just then a Jap walked out of the cave in front of our eyes and seated himself on the path.

He was laughing loudly and a little hysterically. He had a full uniform, but no rifle or helmet. Apparently waiting to be killed drove him crazy. He didn't wait much longer.

Our raiders weren't the least bit excited. All they wanted to do was kill Japs. Some of them had been at Midway. While we were on the beach, marines would talk out of the woods and ask for a smoke. We'd give it and ask how it was going. The most they would say was "okay. Have to go back and get a couple in there." I remember asking one if our losses were heavy. He said "they've killed some of us."

The beach was sprinkled with bodies of Japs. Most of the Japs were shot through the head. The Japs were apparently very young. They didn't look very tough. Some of their uniforms were much like the marines except for different colored leggings and cartridge belts.

The marines were allowed to carry whatever weapons they chose. All had knives, which they spent the night before the attack sharpening. I remember one boy who must have been a Texan. He had twin bandoliers of cartridges across his chest and another around his waist. Two 45 automatics in open holsters were at his sides, with another in a shoulder holster. A long machete was fastened to his belt. And completing his equipment was a tommygun.

The marines told me the Japs spoke good English and used clever tricks. One Jap took the clothes from a dead marine and started to pass our sentries just at dusk. The Jap slapped a sentry on the back and inquired, "what's doing, kid?"

The sentry answered, "never mind what's cooking." Then the marine shot him.

Japs Prove Tricky

The first night ashore the marines occupied a large building but decided to sleep outside, and posted sentries. The next morning they went to reenter the building and were met by machine gun fire. Somehow during the night fourteen Japs had got through our lines and into the house. The marines burned them out.

Japs hid everywhere. I saw one in a tiny hole in a rock. It looked as if he had been born there and grown up to fit the hole. He was dead, sitting cross-legged.

The marines had a lot of respect for the Japs who wouldn't surrender. Sometimes the marines holed, "Surrender, you bastards." The Japs would reply "Come and get us."

No doubt about it, the Japs really fought. One Jap colonel cut his throat as he was about to be captured. Another colonel shot himself. They wore ribbons of the Manchurian campaign. Some soldiers had printed money marked "Honan province," and other tokens indicating they were veterans of the China war.

The Japs also carried money printed for the Solomon on blue paper with pictures of palm trees.

Friendsville Man Is Crushed to Death

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 6 (AP)—R. M. Friend, 41, of Friendsville, Md., was instantly killed when crushed under a truck which plunged down an embankment near here Saturday, Fayette County Coroner Lee R. Herrington reported.

Herrington said Friend and a brother, Henry, were returning to their home after delivering pit posts to a mine. He added the brother escaped unhurt.

Bombers Believed

Maulie plant "appeared to be extremely good."

Accounts of pilots escorting the huge bombers indicated the Fortresses had to fly through the heavy Nazi defenses they have yet encountered. The Nazis apparently had concentrated their greatest possible strength in a vain attempt to turn back the Fortresses before they could get in more of their deadly bombing.

In the previous attacks, the Fortresses have planted bombs with great precision on targets at Rouen, Amiens, Wevelghem, near Courtrai, Belgium, Abbeville, Rotterdam and Leirait and in the first raid on Meaulte.

In the past these powerful bombers have fought off the best efforts of the German fighter planes to shoot them down, especially hurling back attacks by the new German Focke-Wulf 190 plane, the Reich's vaunted aerial weapon.

First Loss of Fortresses

No Fortresses were accounted as having been damaged by German attacks.

An hour before the Fortresses took off for another of their daylight precision raids, United States army bombers attacked the Abbeville airfield.

The RAF followed up these assaults last night by sending its own Boston bombers over Boulogne docks.

Throughout the afternoon and into the night fighter planes dived across the channel to harass the Nazis and engaged the German air force.

The United States bombers were escorted by three squadrons of American fighters and one Canadian squadron.

Despite the heavy task of escorting American bombers and making diversionary sweeps which took from Dixmude to Le Treport, fighter squadrons only lost the three planes reported missing.

There were no United States pursuit planes among the three.

Engaged by Focke-Wulf

One Spitfire pilot escorting the Fortresses which raided the important aircraft plant at Meaulte said the Allied fighters were engaged by Focke-Wulf 190s as soon as they had crossed the French coast.

"This continued on and off all the way to the targets and most of the way back to the French coast," he said. "It was one of the toughest spots we have been in for some time."

The Focke-Wulf 190s came diving down at us, using their familiar tactics of going away as fast as they could after the attack. However, we kept turning in at them as they prepared for their dive and we severely mauled some of them."

Another Spitfire squadron protecting the Fortresses had a running fight all the way into the target and damaged several Nazi fighters.

American Eagle, British and Canadian squadrons escorted the Fortresses.

The extensive assaults on northern France yesterday came after Saturday's heavy raids on Rouen railway yards and the docks of Le Havre.

80 Civilians Killed

The Vichy radio broadcast that more than eighty civilians were killed and 117 injured in Saturday's raid at Rouen.

The air ministry announced that one of the planes which attacked Boulogne was missing.

While the United Nations were carrying out their widespread offensive, the Nazi activity over England was only slight.

Bombs were dropped at single points in northeast and southeast England and the home counties. Damage was caused at one place.

Ground defenses opened up a withering fire last night when German bombers flew over a north-east coastal town. Bombs were dropped and a number of casualties resulted.

and words "Japanese Government One Shilling."

He Only Killed Ten

I talked to one marine in the woods and asked, "How many have you killed?" He answered, "Only ten. The others were killing them left and right."

The marines let us wander everywhere on the island, but we stopped doing it much when we learned they were using us as bait to trap snipers. Several times a bluejacket would walk past a marine crouching silently by the path. The bluejacket would get a few feet past when we would hear shots—one from a sniper aiming at him and the other from the marine who'd been waiting for the sniper to give away his position.

All the time we were unloading, shooting was going on not far from us. At one point the marines were throwing grenades into holes in the cliffs to get the Japs out.

Seeing those marines fight made you proud of them. I'd heard about the Japs' suicidal charges. But those marines were entirely oblivious of their own safety. They walked right into fire and when some of them were killed, others kept going.

Those marines didn't seem to give a damn whether they lived or died, as long as they died shooting at Japs.

Roosevelt Faces

sage to Congress and a "firechat" to the people.

From reliable sources it was learned that the program contemplates the limiting of wages, salaries and farm prices and the appointment of an economic administrator with broad powers. These sources, who could not be named, reported that the control over farm prices would be exercised through the president's war powers, notwithstanding a provision of the price control law which prohibits ceilings on farm products until they have reached 110 per cent parity. Parity is a price calculated to give the farmers purchasing power of a favorable past period, usually 1909-14.

Wants Congress to Act

Norris said that while he agreed thoroughly with administration leaders that the artificial props ought to be abolished and farm price ceilings be made operative at parity, he did not believe the president should attempt to accomplish this without action by Congress.

"If there is the necessity for action, and I don't doubt there is," he declared, "the president ought to come to Congress and ask for repeal of that provision. Not only for this alone, but for what might follow, he ought not to do such a thing by executive order."

Norris said that if the president chose to act by decree, he anticipated a controversy far overshadowing that which resulted from Mr. Roosevelt's request several years ago for legislation to enlarge the supreme court.

Senator McCarran (D-Nev.), who has not always agreed with the president, especially on matters of foreign policy, said he thought the very existence of Congress would be threatened by a move to set aside any provision of law by executive order.

May Appeal to Congress

Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the Senate Finance committee said that while he knew nothing of the forthcoming message except what he had read in published accounts, he did not believe the president would attempt to set aside the law to accomplish even the worthiest purpose.

"I anticipate," he said, "that if the president wants to change the parity price provisions, he will ask Congress to ratify any action he might propose."

He predicted that a rounded program of wage and farm price controls would be favorably received by Congress.

Republicans generally were silent about the forthcoming message pending its official disclosure but one who asked not to be quoted by name said that any attempt to revise a law by executive action would precipitate a vigorous fight.

"I would have a few thousand well chosen words to say on that subject myself," this senator told reporters, adding:

"I don't believe the country would support the president in setting aside legislative enactments."

front was "of no particular importance."

The complete success of the Eighth army under its canny new leadership of Lieut. Gen. B. L. Montgomery and the Near East commander, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, in dissipating Rommel's latest offensive which died aborning was summed up in a headquarters communique:

"Yesterday in the southern sector the enemy continued his withdrawal westward under strong pressure from our mobile columns and artillery.

"His main concentrations are now again west of our minefields through which he first advanced on the night of Aug. 30-31.

"Since then the enemy forces in the area, consisting of the German Afrika Korps and including the Fifteenth and Twenty-first panzer (tank) divisions and the Ninetieth light division with Italian armored and mobile elements, have suffered severe losses in tanks, vehicles and personnel as a result of the constant pressure of our land and air forces.

"In spite of every effort the enemy failed to penetrate our main defensive system at any point."

Rommel Still a Menace

Though the threat to all Egypt was eased for the moment by the resoluteness of the Allied stand, there was no disposition at headquarters to underestimate the resilient striking power of the wily desert fox, Rommel. He has been rebuffed before, but each time he has been able to turn apparent disaster into brilliant victory.

Alexander's game appeared to be one of destruction of the enemy rather than immediate territorial gain. Thus the ceaseless hammering of the enemy from land guns and bombers and strafing fighters.

Rommel's next move was uncertain, and the British did not rule out the possibility that he might try to cross the scythe-shaped Qattara depression which at points is 440 feet below sea level, and strike out for Cairo, by-passing the great naval base of Alexandria on the lush delta of the Nile. The Qattara, in the opinion of some, is not impassable at this time of the year but the British guarded the corridors through the shifting salt marshes strongly.

Next to cotton, iron and steel rank highest among India's industries.

F.D.R. ASKS THEM TO KEEP JOBS

As long as President Roosevelt occupies the White House, Rudolph Forster (left), 71, and Maurice C. Latta, 73, will remain executive clerks although both are past the retirement age. They will stay by order of the President who wrote a memo to them, saying: "I don't want either of you to leave me as long as I am here." The veterans are looking at a bust of "Teddy" Roosevelt, one of the presidents they served under.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wendell Willkie's satisfaction in reporting that for the moment "the Boche has been stopped" in Egypt must have been all the greater because of the large American share in the first round repuff of the Nazi African army.

Most of the planes which Cairo dispatches say roundly thrashed and routed the foe were American-made. The defense of Suez was an exclusive British responsibility for so long, and such stress has been placed on the small number of American tankmen thus far in action, that this tends to be obscured. Many of the aircraft were flown by pilots of newly arrived army air force squadrons, although the majority presumably were a part of the Royal Air Force.

Months ago British airmen in this country reported that the aerial equipment of the Nile's defenders was about half American, and since then the proportion has grown as

London in Favor

United Nations are able to strike directly at the heart of Germany, the United States air force has in its largest operations been able to put only three squadrons of Flying Fortresses and one of medium bombers into action, it was pointed out. This was in the attack on Rouen and Le Havre yesterday.

This is because of the heavy demands on the British and United States air forces at such scattered points as, for instance, the Solomon Islands, India, Malta, Egypt, China, the Aleutians and the Atlantic. Observers who are frank to acknowledge that they naturally are expressing only the airman's view with which the army and navy might well differ, said they believe a concentration of United Nations air power against Germany for the next ninety days would have these effects:

"Only Second Front"

1—Create the only real second front the Allies at the moment are able to create in Western Europe—an airfront that would force Germany to withdraw the Luftwaffe from the Russian battlefields, not only relieving pressure against the Soviets but crippling the Reich's transport system on which Hitler's war efforts depend.

2—Lay the foundation of a supremacy necessary for a full dress invasion of the continent by concentrating such airpower in Western Europe while the Luftwaffe was still entangled in Russia that Reichsmarshal Goering would never be able to match it.

3—Strike such heavy blows with 1,000-bomber night raids and continuous daily precision bombing sorties by flying fortresses that the German industrial machine would be crippled permanently and thus would be incapable of producing the material needed for next spring's campaign.

See Danger in Delay

"If, on the other hand, we delay hitting with concentrated power and Germany is able to turn back to the Western front this winter with a full air force, we may well find ourselves on the defensive in this theater as we are in China, India, the Middle East and the South Pacific."

"Since the battle of Britain, the Germans have improved their bombers with armament and if they are given the chance to reorganize the air strength in Western Europe, they can raid us day and night just as we at present would be able to raid them day and night if we'd only accept the hazards elsewhere and concentrate here where we can do the most good."

The Germans have been using submarines in such a manner as to encourage the Allies to disperse their air strength, it was pointed out.

To meet this challenge, Americans have been extending their air bases and patrols, first in the Caribbean and then down the coast of Brazil, expending the striking power of squadron after squadron, these observers believe.

The British have been forced to creep down the coast of Africa in a similar manner.

fighters and bombers from the United States reached the North African front in mounting numbers.

Authorized Washington sources report that all but a relatively small proportion of the pursuit planes now are conventional American army P-40 fighters. American medium bombers figure prominently in all the desert operations and our heavy bombers have assumed virtually the entire burden of long range hammering of

Good Committeemen Should Be Chosen

THIS NEWSPAPER desires to emphasize remarks hitherto made about the important duty facing Republicans in the primary election Tuesday respecting the selection of party committeemen.

Too often voters overlook the committeemen and sometimes they fail to vote for the required number. Yet, as heretofore noted, the balloting for all the positions to be filled on this board constitutes an important phase of party organization, and voting with wise and prudent discrimination is a really serious party obligation.

As The News has pointed out, a party committee should be as strong as possible, the stronger the better. It should be comprised of men who are not only qualified as good citizens and loyal party members but who are also willing to give their time and effort to the plans and the activities of the committee. All too frequently men get on the committee who look upon their selection as more or less of an honor rather than as a call to good, hard work, which is necessary if the committee is to build up a strong and efficient party organization, which it is supposed to do and which the rank and file expects it to do.

At the primary election Tuesday, Republicans of Allegany county will be called upon to select seven members of their State Central committee. Fourteen candidates have listed themselves for the seven posts:

Edgar M. Lewis, Cumberland.
Jacob H. (Jake) Brown, Cumberland.
Fred B. Driscoll, Cumberland.
W. A. Strother, Cumberland.
Thomas L. Popp, Cumberland.
Earl M. Kerr, Frostburg.
Thomas Elias, Frostburg.
Charles A. Odgers, Frostburg.
Darrall Zellars, Frostburg.
Charles P. Rafferty, Frostburg.
Robert C. Pollock, Mt. Savage.
James Park, Lonaconing.
Richard H. Williams, Midland.
J. Charles Carter, Eckhart.

The obvious thing for Republicans to do is to examine the whole list objectively and select those who appear to be the best fitted for the necessary task of carrying on the party organization work. The News hopes the Republicans of the county will give due heed to this duty and that they will choose wisely and well.

Labor's Big Stake In Free Enterprise

IN AMERICA TODAY—as in days of peace—the man who works with his hands is incomparably better situated than any other worker in the world. If he works in a war industry, he will probably celebrate this Labor day on the job and he will do it gladly because he will be aiding his country to vanquish its foes.

The American worker is part of a system of free enterprise which demonstrably lifts standards of living higher than any other. His wages are incomparably higher than those received by workers elsewhere, and the money he receives for his services has a higher purchasing power.

Despite the tightening pinch of priorities, the American worker has a wider range of consumable goods to choose from than his contemporary in any land. The American worker has a chance to advance himself by his own efforts. The American economy has not yet become so stratified that it is impossible to ascend from one level to another.

This America has given the man who labors with skilled hand, head and eye a place to make him the envy of all who toil. And it will make it possible for him to retain his opportunities. America is a land where problems are solved with the heart as well as with the head. It has taken the lead in forcing the inhuman machine to yield to human needs.

In the long vista ahead, in time of war and in the peace to follow, many developments will come to threaten the well of the worker as the world twists and turns, but the worker has the assurance that at every turn his world-leading status here in America will be preserved.

That is why the American worker engaged in constructing the machines for the destruction of the Axis will work gladly this Labor day. He has everything to work for.

Sullivan and His Music

OBSERVANCE of the centenary of the birth of Sir Arthur Sullivan invites consideration of his rank among celebrated musicians. One is reminded that he must have been a genius, because, before he met and collaborated with William Schwenk Gilbert, his works included, as he said, "symphonies, overtures, ballets, anthems, hymn tunes, songs, part songs, a concert for a cello . . . nothing came amiss to me." At least he was so much of a prodigy that at eight he could play every instrument in his father's band.

Collaboration with Gilbert produced such light opera successes as "Pinafore," "Pirates of Penzance," "Iolanthe," "The Mikado," "The Yeomen of the Guard," and others. Sullivan was hailed for his brilliant music both in Europe and in America. The twenty-five years of his collaboration with Gilbert were an era of musical fun-making which may not be equalled for a long time.

Sullivan will be remembered for these operas, and as long as such hymns as "Onward, Christian Soldiers" rouse the soul with their spirited, yet reverent, tempo, and the solemn strains of "The Lost Chord" stir deep emotion. He was a people's composer who at times soared among the immortals of music.

Accident Rate Is Too Costly

ONE of the by-products of the war production program is a developing safety campaign on the largest scale the nation has ever known. This is to combat a mounting toll of accidents incident to the companionship of machines and men not yet completely experienced in their operation.

At the rate so far this year it is anticipated that 52,000 American workers will be killed and 180,000 permanently injured unless the pace of accidents is slowed down. These figures, which anticipate more than 4,000,000 accidents of all kinds in the ranks of workers, do not include accidents to non-workers.

It seems to take time for a new worker to appreciate fully that a giant shear will clip off a hand, that flying metal will destroy an eye or that a forbidden smoke may result in a deadly explosion.

The prevention campaign which is getting under way is designed to impress the use of safety devices and practices upon the minds of workers so completely that they will forego hazardous conduct as a matter of course. Accidents last year cost American industry the equivalent of 1,500,000 full time workers. The purpose is to reduce this astounding figure this year, if possible.

Burnt cork, standby of the old-time minstrel comedians, is used by those British Commandos who do their stuff in blackface. But the Nazis, naturally, can't see any humor in that.

The discouraging thing to Hitler is that beyond Stalingrad are several thousand more miles of Russian territory.

Uncle Sam can't lose. He's hitched his wagon to two stars—the ones that appear on each wing tip of his warplanes.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser is a little late in getting around to Alexander P. de Seversky's "Victory Through Air Power" (Simon and Schuster)—after it has been read by thousands and thousands of his fellow Americans—but after all, beneath his occasional flippancy about books, the Browser is an idealist and in this book is a compulsion upon every reader to broadcast its precepts.

The preface to the Book-of-the-Month Club's edition contains a preface by Harry Scherman which warns readers: "In reading this remarkable book about the air, keep your feet on the ground." The Browser declares that the warning is futile; no reader of this book can possibly reject it, if he comes to it with a free and open mind.

Maj. Seversky is no light-minded theorist. He is a flier, a designer, a builder of airplanes and a remarkable thinker on the use of the airplane by the American people to win this war. He believes, and for the Browser he proves, that this war can be lost by failure to develop and use the great potentialities of the war-plane; it can be won—if not only, at least most quickly and with least expense of men and treasure—by using America's great industrial power, technical genius, and flying skill to achieve victory. So he has written a thrilling, plausible and inspiring book.

If the Browser seems to editorialize overmuch, he defies you to read "Victory Through Air Power" and be less enthusiastic than he is.

Humorous and wise and plainly accurate is Gertrude Diamant's "The Days of Ofelia" (Houghton Mifflin)—a book about Mexico that is not about its industrial and political background of the politics of the today but about the people whom Miss Diamant lived with in that land. She went to Mexico to see cathedrals and fiestas. She decided to stay, went apartment hunting and met the Escoto family and little Ofelia, who became her maid, and shared the life of the Escoto's family for many months.

H. B. Parkes, author of the excellent and definitive "History of Mexico," says "It is far superior to the innumerable books on Mexico that have appeared during the past decade." It seems so, too, to the Browser.

When the Browser comes upon a book like Beatrice Borst's "Nearer the Earth" (Random House) which won the current Avery Hopwood Award, he is shocked. The judges who gave her the prize were Kenneth L. Roberts, Katharine Anne Porter, and Phil Strong. They must have been very unhappy about it; and Miss Porter's praise is on a high level of restraint: "Nearer the Earth" has many good qualities; wit and good temper and intelligence. The publishers call it "the story of a well-bred girl's coming of age, through trials that are the outcome of her insecurity and frustration and the contradictions of her own character."

Fudge! Miss Borst writes badly, handles the English language like any eager talentless and ambitious child; she has gift for platitudes; and as for her characters—the rude Browser has seen more plausible structures in department store windows. The Browser wouldn't be so angry if this weren't a prize winner.

Mary Collins's "Only the Good" (Scribner) is frankly a murder mystery, laid in the Contra Costa country across the bay from San Francisco, but it is a dozen levels above the more pretentious book. One of the very best of the whodunits of the year. . . . Says Marsh Maslin.

THE BROWSER.

Manpower Out Of Gear Owing To Draft Faults

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The military mind in the front line of combat has an excellent reputation for versatility and resourcefulness in emergencies. But the military mind behind the lines—at a desk that could be filled by a civilian—is rapidly acquiring a reputation for incompetence and red tape stagnation. To prevent this in our mobilization of manpower, it was wisely suggested by Gen. Marshall, chief of staff, that an army specialist corps be established from which civilians of proved competence in administration could be selected to relieve able-bodied, military men to command troops. The plan looked well on paper. Dwight Davis, former secretary of war, was appointed director general. In a short time he organized it, and from all over the country came volunteers. Some were of draft age but married and with dependents. Some were physically disqualified from active service. Some were above draft age. Many were heads of businesses who found they could leave their work to subordinates and go to war. Some were specialists in technical fields much needed by the army.

Unexcelled Spirit

Many were willing to work as civilians or in uniform, to accept army pay or clerk's pay as the case might be. But throughout all the applications was a spirit of patriotic enthusiasm which has been unexcelled in the present war.

More than 225,000 applications have been received. Those which seek to avoid the draft can be readily eliminated and constitute a relatively small percentage. But out of the 225,000 the army set a goal of only 11,000 places to be filled and to date not even half of that number—5,000—have been placed.

The fault does not lie with the army specialist corps, which has been receiving complaints for failure to act on applications. It lies with the army itself—somewhere in the army organization. Army colonels and generals are not asking for the personnel they need and are reluctant to let go of the men they have in subordinate desk jobs.

Nation Wonders

Something has to be done to prod these administrators and make them realize that the whole nation is wondering why the partially deaf, the partially blind and the citizens with heart ailments are being forced into so-called "limited service," disrupting family life and dependency relationships, when there is a big reservoir of volunteers ready to do those quasi-civilian chores needed by the army.

What is unfortunate, too, is that nearly 225,000 citizens are getting an impression of army inefficiency, army red tape, and army delay and lack of foresight and planning. The citizen expects his government to be efficient in time of war at least on the military side. He doesn't believe it possible that there could be a call for men without knowing what to do with them. He doesn't relish being forced to wait months and months to get into the army which he is eager to join while at the same time the head of the Selective Service is warning business men that there are really no necessary men and that everybody is replaceable.

Something Slipped

Paul McNutt is supposed to be head of the manpower commission. He has had a reputation for efficiency of administration but somewhere between Mr. McNutt and General Hershey, of the Selective Service, and the manpower managers of the War Department, something has slipped and slipped badly. There is no co-ordination.

This kind of a situation can only

Reform Effort Is Blamed for Blocking Efficient Prosecution of War Program

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—What's the matter with Washington? Is the first question asked by everyone who gets off the train here, and no doubt by citizens out in the country. Is Nelson really capable of doing the job? Is the second.

Paul Mallon

The answers have been so obvious in the news dispatches lately, the country should understand the situation fully by now. The WPB reorganization is being complicated by too many groups and too many people here who are trying to carry on a revolution at the same time as the war.

It cannot be done. These groups will have to give up their revolutionary ambitions or the nation may have to give up the war.

Look at the headlines of the past few days:

"Labor Demands Nelson Give It Control of WPB."
There is the whole story, told in one of its simplest phases.

Minority Wants Control.
Mind you, this "labor" of the headlines is not the 50,000,000 workers of the country, but the less than 10,000,000 represented in AFL and CIO. They want control of war production.

So do the New Dealers, the radicals, the business men, the politicians, the army, although there are few headlines about their activity, as they are not as brazen in their desires.

No one seems to be shouting for the only thing the country needs—the most efficient possible control, the cessation of all this revolutionary activity by several groups trying to get the upper hand over business.

Nelson's Strength

Mr. Nelson is a strong man, possibly not Hercules, but Hercules himself would have trouble in this situation. He told congressmen he would not accede to the request of the unions to have business delivered into their hands, but he indicated he would give the unions added authority.

Obviously this is not to be done because anyone thinks union leaders can run business any better than business men, but because their power is feared.

How strong Mr. Nelson is, will only become known as he works out his reorganization.

Letter Shows What's Wrong

A complete explanation of the kind of administration this picaresque chicanery leads to, is shown in a letter I received from an editor friend in a small town down south. He wrote me about an experience he had there with the government in what he considered to be a small way, but which actually holds a mirror up to Washington.

This editor's small newspaper plant is in a one-story building, with a section adjoining which was formerly used as a doctor's office. He did not want to ask the doctor to leave, but wanted the space, and planned to take it when the doctor was called to war. But when the doctor left, members of the local rationing board came in, saying it was the only spot in town meeting their needs. They asked the rent.

My friend said the rent was $35 a month, but they could have it for whatever they could afford to pay and he would put the money into war bonds—if they could pay anything. They moved in, borrowing some desks and chairs from him.

Letters Follow Letters

Three months later a letter came from the OPA in Atlanta asking the editor to rent an office to the local rationing board. He wrote back it was quite true. Two weeks later came another letter from Atlanta asking the exact floor space, how many rooms, whether separate toilet facilities were provided men and women.

The staff consisted of three unpaid board members and two girls, so my friend replied with some dignity, that while there was only one washroom, the men were very highly regarded in the community, but if Atlanta considered it essential he would let them use it.

A couple more weeks passed before another letter came from Atlanta explaining the correspondence had reference to 900 square feet of floor space in a one-story brick building at a certain address (they had the address right at least). It went on to say a lease could not be prepared until they had the name or a description of the building, and asked specifically what floor (in the one-story building) the offices were on.

Building Christened

Well, the building never had a name, but my friend thought this was a good time to christen it so he named it after his newspaper and so informed Atlanta, he says "not too politely."

The climax came just before he wrote me. The Atlanta OPA wrote him a stern, stilted letter asking him to send in monthly invoices for $35 signed in triplicate, containing the following signed statement:

"I certify that the above bill is correct and just, that payment therefor has not been received; that all statutory requirements as to American production and labor standards, and all conditions of purchase applicable to the transaction have been complied with; and that state or local sales taxes are not included in the amounts billed."

That, in short, is also what is the matter with Washington.

The SEC Sets An Example

From the New York Herald Tribune

In the regulatory orders which it has issued to corporations and in the public pronouncements of its members the Securities and Exchange Commission has recently made much of the virtue of corporate economy. The burden of its refrain has been that American industry must economize if it is to survive.

This spectacle of one of the top bureaus of an administration which has glorified public spending, preaching corporate economy has evoked, not unnaturally, a good deal of public and private sarcasm, or rather it had, up to a few days ago. But now it suddenly develops that here is one government bureau which not only preaches economy, but also practices it.

The commission, it appears, is pulling in its own belt and doing a real job of it. According to dis-

Culture Swapping By Americas Is Seen As Needful

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—Inter-American cultures are among the things we need to co-ordinate in order to weld the New World countries firmly together, promoters of the consolidation movement are telling us.

Illustratively, John W. White, for years a Yankee news correspondent in Buenos Aires and now in Mexico City, in a recent article published here, emphatically stressed the tremendous hit that our music has been making with Mexicans generally since the two peoples have been getting fairly well acquainted with one another.

Good Interchange

White favors our importation of more of our neighbors' melodies, believing we will like them as much as they do ours, and reasoning that it's a kind of interchange which makes an cogently for mutual understanding as does a community of business and war interests.

There also is a first class quality of Latin-American literature that we're almost entirely unfamiliar with, due to lack of translations. The Latins know ours pretty intimately, since a deal of it has been rendered into Spanish and Portuguese, but their authors haven't broken into our book stores at all extensively. They handle subjects, too, that would be novel to us, and interesting.

Faculty Director William F. Cunningham, of Notre Dame university, a thorough investigator of conditions south of the Rio Grande, also told a National Catholic Welfare Conference seminar a few days ago of social legislation, especially in Argentina and Chile, that we'd profit by a study of.

Latins Ahead of Us

Since the New Deal's advent we are quite conscious of this class of problems ourselves, but the Argentines and Chileans tackled them sooner than we did, and can give us pointers on laws that will work satisfactorily and others that fizzle—because they have already experimented with them. The fact is, we never supposed before that there was anything those "Spigoties" could teach us. It seems there is, though, and it would flatter them to be consulted by us.

My own observation is that Uruguay is the most advanced of the Latin Americas, but it's so small that it doesn't attract attention.

Example Complimented

Father Cunningham, addressing the Catholic seminar referred to above, at South Bend, Ind., paid a compliment to Brazil, as "setting an example for the world" in meeting the race issue.

It is an interesting theme, from the standpoint of any country that has that particular question to wrestle with. In its own way, Brazil dealt with it effectively, all right, but I have my doubts that it accomplished it by a method that our own folk (our Dixie-landers, anyway) would be likely to acquiesce in.

Brazil initially was settled by a far higher percentage of Negroes than even we started with. Brazil was comparatively convenient for them, geographically, to get to from Africa. It needed their labor and they were adapted to the Brazilian tropics. Moreover, Brazil is Portuguese and Portugal has virtually no color prejudice.

Racial Equality Attained

The result was that Brazilian whites and blacks did not remain long in separate classifications. They merged with one another considerably. I don't mean to say that there is no distinction, but there is not a sharp line of demarcation. There is in the climatically temperate south, to be sure, but not at and north of Rio de Janeiro, in the equatorial belt. Even there you can tell the 100 percents apart, but not the big bunch of intermediates.

Consequently a Brazilian Negro is not distinguished against, practically a particle.

Here in the United States a Caucasian does not like to be seen in social company with Ethiopians. He may like them personally, but it makes him unpleasantly conspicuous. In Brazil there is no such inhibition. It has its effect on the Negro, too. He does not feel the need to put on any airs, to prove that he is as good as you are. He simply takes the association as a matter of course or passes it up indifferently, as between any two white men.

Locally, it solves the race problem, as between Caucasians and Ethiopians, all right.

patches from Philadelphia, the wartime headquarters of the S. E. C., that body is abolishing nearly a hundred positions and paring its payroll by $300,000. The staff, it is reported, moreover, will be reduced further by not replacing those leaving the commission to enter war service, and subsequent moves are expected to bring economies to $500,000.

The S. E. C. is said to be the first major government agency to institute a voluntary reorganization and reduction of expenses on such a broad scale.

What the moral of this unusual phenomenon is we are not quite sure; but perhaps it is that more government agencies should get out of Washington and learn how the non-political half of the nation lives.

Leo Reisman Comes to Maryland Wednesday

Rhythmic Leo Reisman, the most dynamic man among the conductors, proves that the artistic point of view is the commercial point of view. Very much in the public eye since the age of twelve when he conducted the high school orchestra in Boston, his birthplace, with his distinctive musicianship and barometric showmanship, he built and held his audiences faithfully. Even at a tender age when his career was still being phoned for him by his dotting parents who hoped he would some day be a doctor, young Leo asserted a preference for the work in which he so distinguished himself. His superior musical training and subsequent artistic expression, plus a colorful dramatic personality, have gained for Reisman an enviable position in the field of dance music.

He began his professional career by playing popular tunes in a music room in Boston, which lucrative job he left one day for a more important one—a one dollar per afternoon—a salary for a young man of no consideration there was no income tax to be paid on it.

A few years later he installed an orchestra with himself at the head, the Brunswick hotel, where he led forth for more than a decade, finally he arrived and settled in New York, the mecca of all artists. Here he was engaged to play at the swanky Central Park Casino, rendezvous of the elite. From that moment to the present the dominating dancing public has been, and willingly, under the spell of his compelling rhythms. Rhythmic Reisman they call him, there is no doubt about it, and justifiably so. He will appear in person at the Maryland theater Wednesday.

Although J. Carrol Naish is a native born New Yorker, studio officials have always found it expedient to cast him as a representative of some foreign country.

Currently appearing in Twentieth Century-Fox's "The Pied Piper," Naish is cast as a French patriot who aids a band of refugee children and their guardian Monty Woolley, to escape from occupied France to England.

Previous to this, the popular character actor has played a Portuguese and a Latin.

Children Should Have Check-up Before School

Pupils Returning to Classes Are Often Neglected, Columnist Says

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph. D.

During the first few days of September, it may be well to ask yourself, "Is my child ready for school?"

Is he ready physically? Thanks to the summer-round-up program of the P.T.A., you may have had the tot who goes to school for the first time this fall carefully checked by your doctor and dentist, and seen to it that all the remedial work was taken care of. You may also have carefully checked with your doctor on his diet, sleep and other health matters.

But what about the youngster who is returning to school, to the third, sixth or eleventh grade? And what about the child entering or returning to college, or going away from home to work? Have his teeth been examined and cared for by the dentist? Has he had a careful physical check by your doctor?

Vision Test Important
"Oh, the school or college doctor will examine him," you say. Perhaps he will. But this doesn't always hold true.

Most school children and college students would profit from a careful vision test by a specialist, the more so if glasses have been worn for several years without an examination, or if there have been complaints of headaches or signs of nervousness, of facial strain; more so still, if the child has not been a good reader or spellier or made good general progress in book learning.

In case your child has had any serious illness during the last several months a medical check is desirable. Especially should there be such a check, including his vision and hearing, if, during the last several months, he has had measles, scarlet fever or another of the children's diseases.

Social Adjustment
Is your child ready socially, getting along with others his age? There's not much time left for him to change in this direction. Yet, all along you might understand him better by careful observation and seeking of ways for his gradual improvement. Parents of children under five or six should look forward now to his entering school and make sure that in the meanwhile he will have had opportunity to learn to get along well with other children of his age. Is your child ready emotionally? Has he looked forward happily

Local Girl Will Become Bride of Altoona Man

Richard Joseph Flick Will Wed Miss Elizabeth Jane Schellhaus

Miss Elizabeth Jane Schellhaus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Schellhaus, 320 Fayette street, will become the bride of Richard Joseph Flick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman H. Flick, Altoona, Pa., at 9 o'clock nuptial high mass this morning in St. Patrick's Catholic church, with the Rev. Charles W. Bogan, officiating.

Miss Anna Mary Mullen will be maid of honor and Miss Schellhaus's only attendant. Renwick T. Nelson, Bedford, Pa., will serve as Mr. Flick's best man and Lawrence Blake and Joseph Schellhaus, brother of the bride, will be the ushers.

The altar banked in ferns will be decorated in white roses, gladioli and asters as well as candelabras of white tapers. The music will be by the church choir.

The bride, who will be given in marriage by her father will be attired in a gown of French net and velvet. The fitted bodice and bow-knots trimming the skirt will be of velvet and her full length veil of bridal illusion will fall from a Juliette cap of matching velvet. She will carry a bouquet of orchids with white satin streamers.

The maid of honor's gown will be of turquoise blue net and Alencon lace. She will wear matching bows in her hair and carry a bouquet of pink roses.

The wedding reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony for the wedding party, relatives and intimate friends. Fall flowers will be used in the decorations of the home.

A three tiered wedding cake ornamented with a miniature bride and bridegroom will center the refreshment table.

The bride's going away costume will be a beige wide-web corduroy suit with which she will wear black accessories.

Upon their return from a wedding trip to New York the couple will reside at the Algonquin hotel. Mr. Flick is local representative of General Motors.

Marriage Is Announced

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Marguerite Hendrickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hendrickson, Baltimore pike, to William T. Jobe, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Jobe, Fayetteville, Tenn.

The ceremony was performed September 2, in the Wesley Methodist church, Chevy Chase, with the Rev. Clarence E. Wise officiating.

The bride is a graduate of Frostburg State Teachers' college and is employed in the Washington public schools. The bridegroom is an attorney in Washington.

TODAY'S VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

ENDIVE
Endive which has not been bleached has a somewhat bitter flavor but this disappears when the leaves or hearts are well blanched. About three weeks before endive is required for use, the plants should be blanched. There are several methods of doing this. One, is to cover the plants with boxes or flower pots. When flower pots are used, the drainage hole should be closed.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, still another method of bleaching is to set two boards (about 10 inches wide) in an inverted V shape along the row of endive plants.

Some gardeners merely gather the leaves together loosely, tying them close to the top with raffia, thus getting nicely bleached hearts.

The twin cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., are picnicking instead of joy riding this summer. Applications for picnics in parks reached by street car have jumped more than twenty per cent.

Barclay on Bridge

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities."

"IMMEDIATENESS" COUNTS FOR GENERAL purposes the combination of the king and queen in a particular suit is more valuable than the ace, though they are usually ranked alike in most high card tables. This is more or less obvious, since a goodly percentage of the time—definitely more than half of the time—the holder of the combination takes two tricks with it. There is one value, however, in the ace which is not possessed by the king-queen. That is its ability to take the first trick in the suit, or what might be called its "immediateness."

Seldom does a single hand give a better example of the difference in effectiveness between an ace and a king-queen. After rather odd bidding, which got South definitely too high, he made his contract because of the special properties of those two entities.

West did not like to underlead one of his queens, so opened the spade J. When East played the A, the K and Q immediately became two trick-takers. East switched to the heart 2, and right there gave a chance to show the value of the "immediateness" held by that A. South used it to take the trick, finessed the diamond 9, covered the diamond A and K, cashed the spade K and Q for one heart discard and the surprisingly established 9 for another, ruffed the heart 5 with the diamond 4 and led the club 5. East got that with the A and returned the club 2 to the K. The heart 7 was then ruffed by the diamond 10, and the final trick was the club 8 ruffed by the diamond J. If South had held the heart K-Q instead of the A, he would have held more potential trick-taking strength in the suit, but would have been set by the heart lead to the second trick, whereas the A made his contract a sure thing after the spade lead. With a heart lead at the start the contract could be beaten two tricks, but that is not the point under discussion.

Pain Is a Mystery, but It Isn't A State of Mind, Clendening Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Pain has been called, as recently as 1939, by a great surgeon — "a state of mind." It would be pretty hard to sell that idea to a person with kidney stone colic or gout. And I am afraid I do not agree no matter how great the surgeon is.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

I admit I do not know the ultimate cause of pain. Oh, I know it is an irritation of the nerves, but why does a person have pain when he runs a sliver in his finger and have no pain with a massive cancer of the stomach? Pain is a mystery to doctors, just as the elasticity of rubber is a mystery to physicists.

Pain as a symptom, though, we know a great deal about, and we know it should never be passed over lightly. "Growing pains," for instance, is a term too often used to explain away serious disease such as osteomyelitis (pus infection of the bone), or tuberculosis of a bone or joint, or real bona fide rheumatism.

In a certain parish in Louisiana a severe epidemic of infantile paralysis went unrecognized for months because the mothers explained it as "teething pains" or "teething disease."

Teething does not cause pain, bad health or fever. If fever occurs during teething it is due to something else. Although Dr. Abels found the curious fact that fever hastens teething.

I realize that in many cases it is impossible to find a cause of "growing pains." The same Dr. Abels ascribes them to a low vitamin intake. But then, name something that is not ascribed to a low vitamin intake? But every case of growing pains should be thoroughly investigated.

I suppose the commonest of all pains are those vague discomforts in muscles, ligaments, tendons and joints which hardly are severe enough to call pains. It is easy to dismiss them and tag them with a name which at least satisfies your conscience for a while. But only too often that name masks some more serious condition.

Meaning of lumbago

"Lumbago," for instance. What does lumbago mean? Well, it means literally a pain in the large lumbar muscles of the back. But the term may mask a serious disease of the bones of the spine, or a disease of the kidneys, or a nervous disease.

True, most of the cases are due to little deposits of infection in the muscles and tendons of the back, and the best treatment is to get your wife or husband, or if you are so unfortunate, as not to possess such a commodity, get the corner grocer to put a piece of flannel on the sore spot and rub over it with a hot iron.

The back, the stomach and the head are the things that ache the ofttest. Maybe pain is a state of mind after all.

Questions and Answers

M. E.: Which states have a climate that is beneficial to persons having atrophic rhinitis?

Answer: The desert states — Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Nevada and the eastern part of California.

M. M.: When a person has developed erysipelas from a sore spot on the nose what can be done to prevent recurrences.

Answer: Erysipelas is very liable to return and there is little known about how to prevent recurrences except to prevent the skin from being infected or broken.

Dear friends:

This community has learned to expect a high type of funeral service.

We are very sure that you could not tolerate now the best type of service given by the undertaker thirty or forty years ago. Modern methods and modern equipment have replaced the old.

State requirements are now very rigid, and a heavy investment in equipment and organization is necessary.

Pirates Score Pair of Shutout Wins over Cubs

Victories Place Bucs Two Games behind Fourth-Place Reds

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 6 (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates came within six games of the first division by shutting out the Chicago Cubs twice today, 6-0 and 5 to 0. The double win places the Bucs only two games behind

Hank Gornicki held the Cubs to four hits in the opener and L. Hamlin allowed them seven in nightcap, but only two after third inning. Claude Passeau

Cub Rookie Joe Berry, making major league debut, gave up runs in the eighth inning of

Brooklyn Takes First Game 6-2, Loses Second 4-2

Split Trims Flatbushers' Lead over Cards to Two and a Half Games

NEW YORK, Sept. 6 (P) — The New York Giants whittled another half-game off Brooklyn's National League lead today by holding the Dodgers to an even split in a doubleheader witnessed by 57,706 paying customers while the St. Louis Cardinals were downing Cincinnati in a single game.

Two southpaws who once wore Cardinal uniforms divided the pitching honors with five-hit performances. Max Macon hurling the Dodgers to a 6-2 triumph in the opener and Tom Sunkel squaring accounts for the Giants, 4-2, in the nightcap with the help of a three-run homer by Johnny Mize, another ex-Cardinal.

The split gave the Giants the series, two games to one, and chopped Brooklyn's lead over the second-place Cards to two and a half games.

Hal Schumacher started against Macon in the first game, but was knocked out of the box before he had retired a man in the second inning.

A double by Macon and a single by Peeewe Reese sent Schumacher to the showers in the second and brought in Van Mungo, who yielded two more runs. Mungo held the Brooks scoreless for the next five frames and Harry Feldman blanked them in the last two.

Mel Ott's twenty-sixth home run in the first inning was the only Giant score until the seventh, when Macon issued passes to Babe Young and Babe Barna and Pinch Hitter Hank Leiber clipped him for a single.

Joe Medwick scored both Dodger tallies in the nightcap, giving Kirby Higbe a two-run working margin. Medwick singled in the second and moved on around on a one-base blow by Arky Vaughan and Higbe.

In the fourth, he belted his fourth home run of the year.

With the bases loaded in the sixth, Ott hit into a forceout with one run scoring, and then Mize settled the issue with his twenty-fourth homer of the year.

The blow was the sixth of Higbe, who stepped out for a pinch hitter in the following frame and suffered his tenth loss against fourteen triumphs. Hugh Casey hurled hitless ball the last two innings. The scores:

A MARK OF DIFFERENCE
HAVE YOU ever noticed how the stronger players strain more than average ones to get out of minor suit contracts and into something else if possible? Meaning into a safe major suit if one exists, or into No Trump if there is a sound situation for it. Contrasted with them, average players sometimes seem almost to be trying to get into minor contracts, in which game is much harder because it requires more tricks. Don't go to absurd extremes in picking unsound No Trump or major contracts, but whenever those declarations are sound, use them to the limit.

So at 4-Clubs it was played. After the heart K lead, the Q was also scored and the spade A, but the declarer took the rest of the tricks without difficulty, winning the returned spade 2 with the K, dropping trumps, finessing diamonds and then discarding his last two hearts on top diamonds. But 4-Clubs will never constitute a game, unless you have a partial score to start with.

Just notice how easy it should have been to get into the proper 3-No Trumps on that deal. After South's 2-Spades, North knew that South had two suits in good shape, and he himself possessed pretty good clubs and late but sure stoppers in hearts. His correct bid at that stage would have been 2-No Trumps, whereupon South could have bid the game.

After North's incorrect 3-Clubs, South still tried to steer the contract into No Trumps if North had any kind of heart stopper. He did this by temporizing with his bid of 3-Diamonds. That gave North another chance to steer the side into No Trumps. It should have been clear he was asking North to bid No Trumps with a heart stopper, but North refused. The sad story is that 3-No Trumps could be made, even with hearts led, followed by a switch to spades, if the declarer will only finesse diamonds.

Mark's Wife

by MARIE BLIZARD
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN
AND WHEN she came to the old house with the tall pillars, the wooden feeling left Pamela and her pulses leaped because the doctor's coupe was parked before it.

Eagerness made her almost stumble up the steps and her hand trembled as she let the knocker fall.

"I'm so glad to see you, Pamela!" Barbara said, looking as if she meant it. "Dr. Bradshaw is here. You can help me entertain him. I've a wretched headache."

"Hi, Tony!" Pamela sang out gaily. She left her tweed coat in the hall and stole an approving glance at herself in the hall mirror, noting that the blue of her taffeta gown was very becoming to her glowing cheeks.

"Hi, Pam! Going to a party?" "Nope. Just another case of being all dressed up and having no place to go."

"You look much too pretty to waste on a call here. Doesn't she, Tony?" Tony said heartily that Barbara was right.

Barbara saw the way that Pamela looked at Tony when he spoke and she said, "Pam, Tony's been howling because he has to go to a medical dinner dance at the Wint-ridge County club a week from tonight. We never want what we have, do we? You want to go to parties and Tony doesn't."

"I do!" he said loudly, meaning that he wanted to go if Barbara, who had just refused his invitation, would go with him.

"Why don't you, Tony?" Pam asked. "Haven't anyone to go with."

"Of course you have! Pamela would love it."

"Would you, Pam?" "I would! It's a date!" "I'm a lousy dancer."

"We can sit all the dances out," she said dreamily, already seeing herself dancing in Tony's arms, according to the full moon and the magnolias.

She adored Barbara at that moment. It was the moment when Tony was called to the telephone. Mrs. Wojarski's twins were on the way and Tony had time for no more than a hasty, "I'll be seeing you girls."

Pamela went to the window, trying to hide her happiness from Barbara. "Mind if I get some dance music?" she asked, snapping the switch of the radio.

"I do, Pam. Please forgive me, but my head is about to split."

She shut it off at once, wanting to do something nice for Barbara. She said, "Tony should have given you something for it."

"Medicine!" Barbara shook her head. "I don't know that they've ever found any for what's the matter with me. My brains ache, Pam. Too much thinking."

She closed her eyes and laid her head against the back of the chair. Pamela went to her and, sitting on the arm of the chair, began to massage the aching temples with sure, cool fingers. "Is it very bad?" she asked.

Without opening her eyes, Barbara replied, "So bad that I may lose the house and the shop, my dear."

"Oh, it can't be as bad as that," Pamela told her in a soothing voice as her fingers continued their rhythmic circling of the throbbing temples. "It's money, of course?"

"Two hundred. It doesn't seem like much, does it? I could pay the bank in six months the way I'm going, and I have ideas for making more, enlarging my activities."

"Two hundred!" Pamela snapped her fingers. "Chicken feed! You'll get it somewhere."

"That's what Tony said. Man-like, he suggested that I put it out of my mind by thinking of going to the dance with him."

Pamela's fingers ceased to move. She might have known that Tony had asked Barbara. A swift pang of jealousy shot through her, but it was gone quickly. Barbara didn't want Tony; she had handed him over to her wholeheartedly. And she meant to make the most of it.

She said, "I can let you have it easily."

Barbara's eyes opened quickly. "I couldn't let you, Pam!" Pamela thought of her $700—and the reason for which she was saving it. Then she thought of Tony and Barbara.

She didn't want it to be Tony and Barbara. She wanted it to be Tony and Pamela, and meant that it would be so, even if she had to take him away from her friend. So she said, "Nonsense! I've got it and nothing to do with it. I'll bring it to you in the morning. If it will make you feel any better about it, we'll make some sort of business-like arrangement. But there's one music?" she asked, snapping the switch of the radio.

"I do, Pam. Please forgive me, but my head is about to split."

She shut it off at once, wanting to do something nice for Barbara. She said, "Tony should have given you something for it."

"Medicine!" Barbara shook her head. "I don't know that they've ever found any for what's the matter with me. My brains ache, Pam. Too much thinking."

She closed her eyes and laid her head against the back of the chair. Pamela went to her and, sitting on the arm of the chair, began to massage the aching temples with sure, cool fingers. "Is it very

Political Leaders Anticipate Light Vote Tomorrow

Primary Campaign One of Dullest Experienced Here in Years

Although there have been a few conferences, political pow-wows and the usual get-togethers that precede each primary or election, Allegany county has experienced one of the dullest primary campaigns in many years.

As voters go to the polls tomorrow from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. to nominate party candidates for various county and state offices, they will be presented with smaller ballots than usual because many offices are not contested.

There is perhaps more interest in the Republican party's primary than in that of the Democrats, because they have more offices contested and quite naturally, those now in office want to stay there and are working hard to defeat opponents who have come out to take over the jobs.

Close Races Seen

The closest battles are expected in the county commission contest on the Republican ticket and the sheriff contest on both tickets. The office of clerk to the county commissioners is also hotly contested by members of the GOP, and candidates for election to judges of the orphans court expect a close battle.

Practically no issues are involved in the primary, except the usual difference which repeatedly raises its head among the Democrats. The party, in almost every primary, seems to have two factions. This time, the Democrats have two slates for election to the state central committee.

The Democratic ballot is shorter than that of the Republicans and is headed by Governor Herbert R. O'Connor, Thomas E. Cook, John Kennedy and Stephen B. Peddicord, seeking the gubernatorial nomination. Pay W. Keiser and Arthur P. Tili are opponents in the race for sheriff.

Six members of the Democratic State Central Committee will be chosen from the following: Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., Charles F. Burke, Jr., Joseph H. Griffin, J. Joseph Hanon, Charles F. Heller, Lawrence A. Hewitt, Bernard Hughes, William Kelly, William B. Lee, John P. Schellhaus, Harry W. Seaber and Thomas E. Staken.

Republican Ballot Longer
On the somewhat lengthy Republican ballot, Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin and W. Pinkney West, Jr., seek the gubernatorial nomination. In the Congressional race are J. Glenn Beall and Henry C. Trisler. Seeking nomination for Associate Judge of the circuit court are Leo H. Miller and Ellsworth R. Roullette. In the race for state senator are Noel Speir Cook and Robert B. Kimble.

Three Republican candidates for county commissioner will be chosen from the following: Simeon W. Green, James Holmes, Estel C. Kelley, Joseph M. Myers, Nelson W. Russell, William L. S. Walker and Charles N. Wilkinson.

In the race for nomination for clerk to the county commissioners are James G. Stevenson, William Stewart and William A. Wilson. Four seeking the nomination for sheriff are George E. Kemp, George W. Lemmert, John H. Patton and David M. Steel.

Eight in House Race
Six will be chosen for the House of Delegates race from the following: Lulu W. Boucher, Eva M. Chaney, Eldred A. Cromwell, J. Milton Dick, Kenneth G. Morgan, Lester B. Reed, Charles M. See and Jonathan Sleeman. Three will be chosen for the nomination for judge of the Orphans Court from: R. Hilary Lancaster, Thomas H. Taylor, J. French Van Meter and Bernard B. Young.

From a total of fourteen seeking the nomination for Republican State Central Committee, seven will be chosen. Candidates are: Jacob H. Brown, J. Charles Carter, Fred B. Driscoll, Thomas Elias, Earl M. Kerr, Edgar M. Lewis, Charles A. Odgers, James Park, Robert C. Pollock, Thomas L. Popp, Charles P. Rafferty, W. A. Strother, Richard H. Williams and Darrell G. Zeller.

Party leaders and several candidates last night agreed that the vote will be light, with probably not more than twenty-five to thirty per cent of the registered voters of either party casting ballots.

TRAFFIC IS BLOCKED WHILE TWO NEGROES FIGHT IN STREET

Traffic was tied up in both directions yesterday afternoon on Winewalk street and the tie-up was not due to a blocked railroad crossing or auto crash.

It seems that two negroes, one of them a follower of a carnival which played Community park last week and a local man got into an argument and ended up in a fist fight. During the melee they worked their way into the middle of the street.

Most of the motorists and a crowd of about 100 negroes watched the battle with interest but finally Constable Harry Reiber drove up and in the absence of a city policeman arrested the two negroes.

Booked at police headquarters they gave their names as William Bates, Rolling Mill alley, and Abraham Cole, "carnival". Both were jailed for a hearing on charges of disorderly conduct.

Voting Results To Be Broadcast Tuesday Night

In an effort to give the public prompt and efficient service in providing election returns Tuesday, the facilities of the Times-News and radio station WTBO are being combined.

The returns will be broadcast from 10 p. m. until midnight. Service cannot be extended past midnight because of war conditions.

Returns will be posted on the Times-News bulletin board.

Allegany Students Will Return to School Wednesday

Teachers Will Meet at Fort Hill Tomorrow Morning at 10 o'Clock

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock principals and teachers of Allegany county public schools will meet in Fort Hill high school to receive general instructions prior to the opening of the 1942-43 term Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. Robert Kazmayer, of New York will address the teachers.

Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of schools, said last night he expects between 15,000 and 16,000 students to attend classes Wednesday. Parochial schools will open today with approximately 2,000 students expected to report for classes.

Kopp said there would be no radical changes in the curricula of the schools this year but that training will be given which it is hoped will help the nation "win the war."

Stress will be placed on the former so that pupils may obtain a better understanding of what the war means and the problems to be faced now and after its successful conclusion. Training in the latter subjects will prove of direct aid in war industry employment or in the war itself as fighting men and women.

Despite the impossibility of securing the number of industrial arts teachers desired, the industrial art program will not be eliminated at any school where it has been established but the program will be curtailed. In this connection Kopp commented, "we will be a bit air-minded."

Kopp said there will not be too much diversion from the regular course of study as the board does not want to get away from the real function of the schools but that with adaptations the program offered will be one to "help win the war."

Funeral Services For Dr. Black Will Be Held Today

Father of James A. Black, of Cumberland, Dies after Brief Illness

Funeral services for the Rev. Dr. Blanchard Allen Black, 68, pastor of Trinity Reform church, Rockwood, Pa., will be held today at 11 a. m. at the church. The Rev. Dr. Black died early Saturday morning after an illness of one week.

Dr. Black was a son of William W. and Frances Allen Black. He attended Mercersburg Academy, Lock Haven State Normal, Franklin and Marshall College Seminary, Union and Auburn Seminars and the University of Chicago.

He held pastorates at Lone Tree, Iowa; Louisville, Ohio; Wilkes-Barre, Irwin and Meyersdale, Pa.; and had been president of the Iowa, East Ohio, Westmoreland and Somerset classes and of the Pittsburgh Synod. He was a delegate to the general synod five times.

Dr. Black was pastor of Amity Evangelical and Reformed Church, Meyersdale for fifteen years where he organized the Christian Endeavor Society, a young people's chorus and directed plays. Sunday school attendance was doubled and numerous improvements made to the church. He performed 350 baptisms and received 435 members. June 25, 1939 he retired because of ill health and until he accepted the local pastorate a number of months ago supplied churches between Lancaster, Pa. and Cleveland.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Mertle Ellen Loehr Black; nine children, Mrs. John Smith, Sharon, Pa.; Mrs. Joseph Connolly, McKeesport, Pa.; Mrs. Douglas C. Brodie, at home; Mrs. Donald Dively, Waynesburg, Pa.; James A. Black, business manager of the Times-News papers, Cumberland; William W. Black, Cincinnati; Mrs. James Hoblitzell, Washington; Miss Ruth Black and Miss Marcia Black, both at home; a sister, Miss Mabel Black, Alexandria, Pa., and two grandchildren.

Rites for Mrs. Miller
Funeral services were held at the home yesterday afternoon for Mrs. Emma S. Miller, 59, wife of Charles (Continued on Page 8, Col. 2)

War Production Continues in City Despite Holiday

Most Business Places Closed All Day; Plants Are Operating

Labor day is to be observed throughout the city today as a legal holiday by most establishments, particularly retail stores, banks and offices, however, in plants and industries where there is war production a regular schedule of operation is to be observed and the hum of machinery will continue without interruption.

The post office, county court house, city hall, trial magistrates' office, local draft boards and other public institutions including the library will observe the holiday. The Office of Price Administration in the Liberty Trust building and offices of local ration boards on Union street will remain open.

At the Celanese plant where there is some war work underway there will be no interruption in the regular schedule. At the Allegany Ordnance plant, operated by Kelly Springfield Engineering company, work on installation of machinery and remodeling the property will likewise continue. The production line, maintained by the Kelly-Springfield Tire company, making special war materials will also continue to move in the usual fashion.

At a number of smaller plants where work on war production is underway workmen will also report at the usual time so there will be no loss of man-hours or let-up in production.

Work at the Municipal Airport, now under construction near Wiley Ford, will be halted today, however, men assigned to the quarry nearby which furnishes stone for paving the runways will continue. The stone is needed to keep the airport project moving steadily.

There will be no evening paper published here this evening, and the Cumberland News will not appear tomorrow morning, as newspaper employees observe the holiday.

Cumberland Branch N.A.A.C.P. Will Meet Tomorrow Night

The Cumberland branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock in Carver high school, Frederick street.

John Wormack, president will preside and has extended an invitation to all persons interested in the welfare of the organization as well as to all members.

Six Births Are Reported

Mr. and Mrs. Howard F. Powers, 138 Bedford street, announce the birth of a son, Sunday morning, in Allegany hospital.

Railways and Bus Lines Crowded Over Holiday

Highway Travel in Private Cars Limited Due to Rationing

Gasoline rationing and shortage of tires and the fact that many industrial workers are not observing the Labor day holiday this year, contributed measurably to a noted reduction in the usual amount of highway travel. According to state police there are fewer cars on the road this year than many of them can remember for a legal holiday, although some residents took short drives to nearby communities yesterday and plan short trips today.

Travel by bus and train has, since the rationing program, increased steadily and trains and buses were well filled, Saturday and Sunday. Local bus operators say there was so much demand for travel over bus lines, that special buses were added and many persons were required to wait for later schedules, as buses filled to capacity, with many passengers standing.

Railroad officials say, however, that they were able to handle all traffic without difficulty, although some trains carried extra coaches and were well filled. No extra sections of passenger trains were necessary over the weekend, although passenger traffic is at the highest peak in years.

Both railways and bus lines expect to be able to handle whatever traffic may materialize today and tomorrow, as a result of the holiday, officials believe.

IN MARINE CORPS—Two new members of the United States Marine Corps are Charles Snider (left) son of Mrs. Joseph Snider, 6 East First street, Cumberland and Paul Goetz, (right) son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Goetz, Corrigansville. The Marine recruiting office in Pittsburgh recently announced the two young men have been accepted for service with the fighting "Leathernecks" and have been assigned to Parris Island, S. C., for basic military training. They were both sworn in at Pittsburgh.

Plan Organization To Prevent Fires In Rural Sections

County Farm Agent Calls Attention to Danger of Heavy Losses

On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock a meeting will be held in the city hall for all persons interested in helping combat rural fire hazards, and work out a plan to prevent severe losses in the event of an air raid or other disaster.

The meeting has been called by Ralph P. McHenry, county farm agent, as a part of a precautionary program in a county-wide movement. A. V. Keewatch, of the University of Maryland's engineering department will be here to assist in forming the organization.

In the event of air raids when enemy planes fail to achieve their objectives, Mr. McHenry says, it is the experience of this war that bombs are dumped at random over the countryside with ensuing losses to farm and farm products.

Those who will attend the joint-agency meeting include: Vincent P. Ingram, county director of civilian defense; R. J. Snyder, county fire marshal; H. C. Buckingham, district forester; and Mrs. McHenry.

Directors of rural neighborhood groups from all over the county will also attend the meeting. They are A. R. Shaffer, Little Orleans section; Ross Shaw, Oldtown; Delbert Valentine, Spring Gap; Martin Gordon, Flintstone; W. H. Johnson, Union Grove; Earl T. Lepley, Mt. Savage; William Loar, Potomac Valley; Charles S. Harvey, Frostburg; and Evan Meese, Westernport.

FIVE LOCAL YOUNG MEN ARE ENROLLED AS AVIATION CADETS

Five young men from Cumberland began their pre-flight course at Maxwell Field, Ala., August 18, after being enrolled as aviation cadets in the army air forces school for pilots. The field is located on the outskirts of Montgomery, Ala.

The cadets will receive nine weeks of intensive military, physical and academic training, preparatory to their twenty-seven weeks of flight training, which leads to the highly-covered wings symbolizing the role of a flying officer in the nation's air forces.

Upon completion of their course at Maxwell Field the cadets will enter one of the many primary flying schools in the Southeast Army Air Forces Training Center.

WILLIAM F. HOSEY GRADUATES FROM FLYING SCHOOL

Staff Sgt. William F. Hosey, son of Mrs. Leah Hosey, 14 Market street, who has been in the service three years, graduated yesterday with the largest class of military pilots ever trained at Kelly Field, Tex.

Hosey, a graduate of Allegany high school, in the class of 1937, was stationed in Panama, Canal Zone, for two years prior to entering the aviation branch in January this year. He enlisted April 4, 1939. He has not been home for three years but expects to be here in the near future for a furlough.

Following student pilot tradition, mothers, wives and sweethearts of the pilots graduating yesterday were named "honorary members" of the class. Sgt. Hosey's mother will be presented with miniature silver wings, emblematic of the honor and replicas of those awarded her son.

Meeting Is Postponed

The meeting of East Side Company No. 843, Minute Men, scheduled for tonight will not be held due to the Labor day holiday.

State Guardsmen Fight Mock War At Water Tower

Company D Gets Experience in Taking over Vital Section of City

About thirty members of Company D, Maryland State Guard, spent most of yesterday afternoon in an outdoor drill and sham battle in the vicinity of the Ridgedale water tower and the area overlooking the Kelly-Springfield plant.

Emphasis was placed upon scouting and patrolling, and the guardsmen, dressed in battle uniforms which blend with the foliage and landscape learned the rudiments of advancing through open and wooded terrain, finding and taking cover and concealment and providing individual protection while at the same time harassing and overpowering an enemy.

A detail of men commanded by Sgt. John P. Nimick was sent out in advance and established a guard around the water tower which overlooks the city. It was their task to assume to destroy the tower and also to destroy power lines in the vicinity.

The attacking force, divided into two elements was under the command of Sgt. Herman M. Heller and Sgt. Charles C. Wiant.

The detail under the command of Sgt. Nimick held the attackers off for more than an hour, but were finally over-powered by sheer weight of numbers and the use of cover in the heavily wooded area and thickets which surround the tower.

Problems of this type, a part of the guardsmen's training will be carried out each Sunday afternoon, as long as weather permits. Each week the guardsmen will train in a different section, and in time will be thoroughly familiar with all the wooded areas trails and roads around the city. This training is an assignment from Battalion headquarters, because the guardsmen, to render the best possible service to the community must know every yard of the county-side.

Sunday's problem was under the supervision of First Sgt. F. Allan Weatherholt.

News-Times Employee Leaves for Service With Naval Reserves

Charles B. Hornbrook, of Windford road, leaves this morning for Camp Allen, near Norfolk, Va. to begin training with the United States Navy construction corps, known as the "Seabees."

Hornbrook enlisted several weeks ago with the rating of photographer, first class, in the naval reserve. He has been an employee of the Times and Alleganyan company for about six years. While he is in the service his wife and two children will reside here.

City Council To Name New Milk Inspector To Fill Vacancy

Three applications are being considered by the Cumberland Board of Health, for the post of city milk inspector. The applicants are Thomas A. Neff, F. Elmo Coniff and John Bengerd. The board will make a recommendation to the mayor and city council for an appointment.

A vacancy for this city position occurred when J. Byron Dowling resigned to accept a state position. He will remain on duty, however, until his successor is named.

Lindners Capture Cash and Ribbons In Honey Exhibits

Dr. Burnside, University of Maryland apiarist, was the judge of exhibits.

Important Meeting Of Zone and Senior Wardens Is Called

A meeting of great importance for all zone and senior air raid wardens will be held in the city hall auditorium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock according to an announcement made last night by Herman L. Myers, assistant air raid warden for Allegany county.

Zone and senior wardens comprise the leadership for more than 600 air raid wardens in Cumberland. These leaders number approximately 100 and are responsible for the protection of the locality in which they live, Myers said.

The nature of the meeting tomorrow night is of such importance that identification of those attending will be necessary, Myers added.

Community Forum Committee Offers 1942-43 Program

Four Speakers Booked for Season Which Opens November 9

Due to the war and the fact that people generally are interested in civilian defense or some other outside activity other than their work, the Cumberland Community Forum committee of the junior association of commerce has agreed that fewer lectures should be held during the current season.

By reducing the number of lectures from six to four, and working with about the same budget for speakers, the committee has been able to provide quality speakers rather than quantity, according to P. Perry Smith, this season's forum chairman.

Also by holding only four lectures this year it has been possible to reduce the price of season admission tickets, and still absorb the tax on admissions in the season purchase price.

Four Dates Fixed

Four dates have been fixed for the season's lectures. The first will be held Monday, November 9, when Col. Carlos P. Romulo, aide-de-camp to General Douglas MacArthur will open the series of lectures.

Col. Romulo was the last man to leave Bataan before its surrender and is now in this country making a lecture tour. He was winner of the 1941 Pulitzer prize for interpretative correspondence and is a past-president of Rotary International.

Famed for his exploits at Bataan this Filipino officer will tell the story of Bataan and will explain the true situation in the Pacific.

The second lecturer on the season's program will be James Conzelman well known to sports fans as an outstanding coach and athletic director. Conzelman will be here Monday, January 11, 1943.

Rev. Stout, mystery story writer, novelist, radio commentator and lecturer will speak on Monday, February 15, 1943. He is well known as master of ceremonies on the NBC program, "Speaking of Liberty," and is perhaps equally well known as the author of "Too Many Cooks," "Some Buried Caesar," "Red Threads," "The League of Frightened Men" and many others. In addition to his twenty-one completed and published books, he has written numerous articles and stories for the American magazine and Saturday Evening Post.

Van Paassen Will Speak
Last, but far from least, the final speaker of the series will be Pierre Van Paassen, on Monday, December 7, 1943, one year after the attack on Pacific possessions of the United States by Japan.

Van Paassen, fresh from Europe's battlefields, as a war correspondent and observer of men and events brings to his audiences a thrilling account of what is going on inside Europe today and interprets its mighty consequences for the future.

Many requests from forum patrons have been received by the committee for Van Paassen's appearance on the local platform. The committee tried to make a contract with him last season but could not agree on a satisfactory date. He has signed a contract to close the series here and his name and appearance adds much to the whole program.

F. S. A. OFFICE IS OPENED HERE

A Farm Security Administration office has been opened in the local post office, Room 211, with Kenneth R. Wagaman as representative. The FSA operates under supervision of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Until its closing a few days ago, Wagaman was located in the FSA office at Grantsville. Closing of the office, he says, and the opening of offices in Oakland and Cumberland was dictated by considerations of travel and increased demand for the office's services.

The Farm Security Administration makes rehabilitation loans to farmers for the purchase of livestock, equipment, buildings, seed, fertilizer, lime and other items for the successful operation of a farm. Loans are made, Wagaman says, on the basis of a farm family's ability to engage in agriculture. Both tenants and owners are eligible. Through FSA loans and guidance, Wagaman says, many part-time and full-time farmers in Allegany county have been able to raise the major part of their own food and to produce surpluses needed for the war effort.
